Naive Bayes on Political Text

In this notebook we use Naive Bayes to classify text speeches (congressional speeches, specifically). We DOWNLOAD the full dataset. You can download the separate ZIP from the shared dropbox or from Handouts.

{"text":"Wrongly, he confirmed, Mary had left her office, leaving her with the impression that she was coming back. Instead, she had gone home to her husband, Jack, who was a lawyer in the city. Jack was a tall, handsome man with a kind face and a voice that could calm anyone down. He was the opposite of his wife in many ways. While Mary was loud and impulsive, Jack was quiet and methodical. He spoke softly and listened more than he talked. He was the kind of man who remembered everything his wife forgot. He was the kind of man who made sure the children had their lunches packed and their homework done. He was the kind of man who was the rock that the family stood on. He was the kind of man who was the reason Mary could do her job without worrying about her children. He was the kind of man who was the reason Mary could be a mother and a wife and a lawyer all at the same time. He was the kind of man who was the reason Mary could be a woman who was not a victim of her own life
